FLEXIBLE INCOME FUND

At a glance

Performance*
The Fund returned −3.84%, the Index returned −3.51% and the Sector returned −3.21%.

Contributors/detractors
Our overweight allocation to spread risk detracted, as did overall yield-curve positioning. The diversified overweight allocation to securitised sectors contributed to relative performance.

Outlook
We think elevated yields may support attractive income, diversification and long-term return potential. We continue to favour what we view as high-quality carry and limited downside risk in securitised sectors.

Investment environment

- US fixed-income markets posted negative returns on the back of sharply higher yields after the Federal Reserve (Fed) hiked interest rates amid a resilient economy, rising oil prices following the collapse of a fragile US-Iran ceasefire, and increased private sector debt issuance.
- Securitised credit sectors outperformed Treasuries and investment grade corporate bonds.
- The Fed held the federal funds rate steady in July, then raised it by 25 basis points (bps) in September to 3.75% to 4.00%, its first hike in more than three years. Chair Kevin Warsh said inflation had been too high for too long. Futures markets are pricing in one more hike this year, and at least another two in 2027.
- US hiring slowed over the summer before rebounding in August, when a surprisingly high 162,000 jobs were added and unemployment held at 4.1%. US year-over-year inflation eased from 3.5% in June to 3.4% in both July and August but remains stubbornly high.
- The 10-year US Treasury yield ended the quarter 85 bps higher at 5.29%, while the 2-year yield ended 74 bps higher at 4.88%.
- Investment grade corporate bond spreads widened 6 bps to 80 bps, while high yield bond spreads widened 41 bps to 311 bps.

Portfolio review

The overall overweight credit risk position and resulting underweight to Treasuries detracted modestly, as credit sectors underperformed comparable-maturity Treasuries. However, this was more than offset by our strong preference for securitised credit sectors, such as private-label collateralised mortgage obligations (CMO), asset-backed securities (ABS) and commercial mortgage-backed securities (CMBS), as these sectors outperformed corporate bonds. Off-benchmark allocations to loans and collateralised loan obligations (CLO) also contributed, as demand for floating-rate credit rose amid interest rate uncertainty, as did the holding in high-yield corporate bonds. Security selection in agency mortgage-backed securities (MBS) detracted.

Our large overweight position in securitised credit is diversified across ABS, CMBS, residential mortgage-backed securities (RMBS) and collateralised loan obligations (CLOs). Low unemployment has supported household finances, which in turn has supported consumer-backed ABS. Meanwhile, CMBS remains attractive due to a meaningful spread pick-up versus corporates, and strong and consistent investor demand, which we believe is underpinned by stable property-level fundamentals and generally orderly deal execution. CLOs are supported by the still-robust corporate earnings picture, while their floating-rate structure may benefit from interest rate increases.

During the quarter, we added spread risk as spreads widened, although our overall credit risk level is neutral relative to our long-term strategic asset allocation risk level. While we added selectively to corporate bonds, our allocation to investment grade corporate bonds remains near its cyclical low weighting. We increased allocations to CLOs and maintained the allocations to CMBS and ABS. Having trimmed the holding in agency MBS earlier in the period, we rebuilt it later after the asset class had sold off. However, the position remains modestly underweight.

Overall yield curve positioning detracted modestly. The overall composition of our position across the curve, including the underweight to longer-maturity securities, detracted where yields rose less compared to the middle of the curve as the yield curve flattened. This was partially offset by the underweight duration position for much of the period, as yields rose.

We moved from a modest duration underweight position to a moderate overweight in September as higher yields have improved the risk-reward profile of interest rate exposure. Beyond the additional income available at current yield levels, we believe duration may offer an increasingly attractive means to help insulate the portfolio against a potential growth slowdown, recession or other risk-off events.

Manager outlook

Bond yields have risen sharply, due to a combination of rising Treasury yields and widening spreads. This comes in the wake of continued US economic strength and heavy borrowing by the government and by companies funding investment in artificial intelligence (AI). It also follows a fresh rise in oil prices and the Fed's renewed focus on bringing inflation down to its target of 2%. Despite the turbulence in rates markets, the underlying credit fundamentals remain sound, providing a base from which we may consider selectively adding risk now that valuations have become more attractive.

A key risk that we continue to watch is whether higher energy prices or overtightening of monetary policy by the Fed could cause the economy to weaken too much. With the path to resolving the US-Iran conflict unclear and unlikely to occur before the US midterm elections, oil prices have the potential to move sharply in either direction, altering the outlook for economic growth and inflation for better or worse. The futures market points to as many as four 25 bps hikes over the next 12 to 15 months, although we expect fewer. Meanwhile, markets have already priced in substantial Fed tightening, lifting benchmark bond yields and real yields to multi-decade highs.

We believe elevated yields and strong fundamentals support attractive income generation and long-term return potential. However, we remain cognisant that spreads, even after recent widening, still are below longer-term averages, so our overall risk positioning is moderate.

We continue to favour securitised credit over corporate credit from a valuation and technical perspective, as securitised sectors offer what we view as a more compelling combination of high-quality carry with less risk. In contrast, we remain cautious about investment grade corporate bonds due to unfavourable market technicals – namely, the expected headwind of further new supply, with AI-related borrowing potentially exceeding $1 trillion next year.

Investment policy

The Fund invests at least 60% (but normally more than 70%) of its assets in US bonds of any quality, including high yield (non-investment grade) bonds and asset-backed and mortgage- backed securities, issued by governments, companies or any other type of issuer. The Fund may also hold other assets including bonds of other types from any issuer, preference shares, cash and money market instruments. The Sub-Investment Adviser may use derivatives (complex financial instruments) to reduce risk, to manage the Fund more efficiently, or to generate additional capital or income for the Fund. The Fund is actively managed with reference to the Bloomberg US Aggregate Bond Index, which is broadly representative of the bonds in which it may invest, as this forms the basis of the Fund's performance target. The Sub-Investment Adviser has discretion to choose investments for the Fund with weightings different to the index or not in the index, but at times the Fund may hold investments similar to the index.

Investment strategy

The Sub-Investment Adviser's investment process is research-driven, incorporating "top-down" and "bottom-up" factors to identify and manage exposure to risks across sectors, industries, and individual investments. Fixed-income portfolio management evaluates expected risk-adjusted returns on a portfolio and position level by analysing fundamentals, valuations, and market technical indicators. This research encompasses both traditional fundamental analysis and data driven quantitative models and signals from such models.

Fund specific risks

An issuer of a bond (or money market instrument) may become unable or unwilling to pay interest or repay capital. If this happens or the market perceives this may happen, the value of the bond will fall. When interest rates rise (or fall), the prices of different securities will be affected differently. In particular, bond values generally fall when interest rates rise (or are expected to rise). This risk is typically greater the longer the maturity of a bond investment. While high yield (non-investment grade) bonds generally offer higher rates of interest than investment grade bonds, they are more speculative and more sensitive to adverse changes in market conditions. Asset-Backed Securities (ABS) and other forms of securitised investments may be subject to greater credit / default, liquidity, interest rate and prepayment and extension risks, compared to other investments such as government or corporate issued bonds and this may negatively impact the realised return on investment in the securities. Some bonds (callable bonds) allow their issuers the right to repay capital early or to extend the maturity. Issuers may exercise these rights when favourable to them and as a result the value of the Fund may be impacted. High exposure to a particular country or geographical region carries a higher level of risk than a more broadly diversified portfolio. If the Fund holds assets in currencies other than the base currency of the Fund, or you invest in a share/unit class of a different currency to the Fund (unless hedged, i.e. seeks to mitigate exchange rate movements between the share/unit class currency and the base currency of the Fund), the value of your investment may be impacted by changes in exchange rates. Derivatives may be used to help achieve the investment objective. This can result in leverage (higher levels of debt), which can magnify an investment outcome. Gains or losses may therefore be greater than the cost of the derivative. Derivatives also introduce other risks, in particular, that a derivative counterparty may not meet its contractual obligations. When the Fund, or a share/unit class, seeks to mitigate exchange rate movements of a currency relative to the base currency (hedge), the hedging strategy itself may positively or negatively impact the value of the Fund due to differences in short-term interest rates between the currencies. Securities could become hard to value or to sell at a desired time and price, especially in extreme market conditions when asset prices may be falling, increasing the risk of investment losses. Some or all of the ongoing charges and other costs of the Fund may be taken from capital, which may erode capital or reduce potential for capital growth. In addition to income, this share class may distribute realised and unrealised capital gains and original capital invested. Fees, charges and expenses are also deducted from capital. Both factors may result in capital erosion and reduced potential for capital growth. Investors should also note that distributions of this nature may be treated (and taxable) as income depending on local tax legislation. Losses could be incurred if a counterparty became unwilling or unable to meet its obligations, or as a result of failure or delay in operational processes or the failure of a third party provider.
