GLOBAL SELECT FUND

At a glance

Performance*
The Fund returned 1.06%, the Index returned 1.12% and the Sector returned 0.22%.

Contributors/detractors
Stock selection in the communication services sector detracted from relative performance, while stock selection in the financial sector contributed.

Outlook
We aim to take advantage of market volatility to pursue opportunities in companies where we believe the market may undervalue the potential for free cash flow.

Investment environment

- Global equities were volatile in September as geopolitical tensions pushed oil prices higher, contributing to higher inflation and rising bond yields (lowering prices).
- The US Federal Reserve (Fed), European Central Bank (ECB) and Bank of Japan (BoJ) raised policy rates.
- Sector performance was mixed. Information technology (IT) stocks outperformed due to renewed excitement around artificial intelligence (AI) and AI-related capital spending, against a backdrop of positive earnings news for many AI companies. Materials stocks declined amid renewed concerns about potential headwinds to global economic growth.

Portfolio review

Contemporary Amperex Technology (CATL) was a relative detractor. CATL is China's leading supplier of electric vehicle (EV) batteries, but slower-than-expected vehicle sales in China have led to some near-term earnings uncertainty. However, we believe CATL remains well positioned in the EV battery market. We also see potential around its growing leadership in energy storage solutions (ESS), which can improve the efficiency and reliability of renewable energy for the power grid. CATL has signed several large ESS deals, and it has been a beneficiary of an increased focus on energy storage capabilities.

Arthur J Gallagher was another relative detractor. A global provider of insurance brokerage and risk management, the company has taken advantage of industry fragmentation to grow its market share and strengthen its competitive position. However, while the company's recent financial performance was in line with expectations, it reported some slowing in its brokerage and mergers and acquisitions (M&A) businesses. This news, along with increased economic and market uncertainty, pressured its share price. We continue to see opportunity tied to the company's focus on the mid-market segment and its strategic use of AI to support operational efficiencies.

Relative performance benefited from positions in several AI-related semiconductor and networking equipment companies that rebounded in September as investors shook off recent concerns about the pace of industry capital spending. Relative contributors included ASML Holding, a global supplier of lithography equipment used in the production of advanced semiconductors. ASML has also continued to report strong earnings growth and guidance (forecasts). We remain constructive on its long-term outlook, supported by its demand visibility, growing AI adoption, and elevated lithography intensity trends across the advanced logic and DRAM markets.

Another relative contributor was Seagate Technology Holdings, a supplier of data storage solutions such as hard disk drives (HDDs) and solid state drives (SSDs). Seagate is one of two leading companies in the global market for HDDs, which provide a cost-effective, high-capacity, long-term data storage alternative to SSDs. The combination of surging hyperscaler demand and limited capacity additions in this market has led to better pricing dynamics, along with opportunities for margin expansion. Seagate reported strong second-quarter results, with both revenues and earnings exceeding expectations.

Manager outlook

Market performance this year has been shaped by shifting assessments of geopolitical risks, economic conditions, and the strength of the AI investment cycle. Following a volatile first quarter, markets rallied in the second quarter as hopes for easing tensions in the Middle East led to lower oil prices, moderating inflation, and a renewed focus on corporate fundamentals and AI-related opportunities. Many of these trends reversed in the third quarter. Geopolitical uncertainty increased, crude oil prices moved higher, and concerns about inflation led major central banks to raise policy rates. Bond yields also rose (prices fell) to their highest levels in several years. As a result, investor sentiment became more cautious, leading to greater market volatility and broader shifts across sectors and regions.

Looking ahead, we expect market volatility to persist until there is greater clarity on geopolitical developments and their potential impact on the global economy. While corporate earnings and economic growth have remained relatively resilient, a prolonged conflict in the Middle East could have significant repercussions for energy markets and broader economic activity.

We remain alert to how shifting geopolitical and economic trends may impact the companies we own. However, our primary focus remains on using market volatility to our advantage as we seek out companies with durable competitive advantages, solid balance sheets, experienced leadership teams, and strong free-cash-flow growth that we believe are undervalued by the market. We continue to find opportunities across industries and regions, including European banks, which may benefit from higher interest rates, reduced regulation, and ongoing industry consolidation. We remain optimistic about long-term opportunities driven by innovation, particularly digitalisation and AI. At the same time, we have seen increased concerns over the impact of AI-related spending on corporate balance sheets and cash flows, and the ability of companies to generate attractive returns on these investments. Given these concerns, we remain selective in our AI-related investments, finding opportunities with international technology and memory chip manufacturers that are trading at much lower valuations relative to their US counterparts.

Cash balances and exposures are based on settled and unsettled trades as at the reporting date.

Investment policy

The Fund invests at least two-thirds of its assets in a portfolio of shares (equities) and equity-related securities of companies, of any size, in any industry, in any country. The Fund may also invest in other assets including cash and money market instruments. The Investment Manager may use derivatives (complex financial instruments) to generate additional capital growth or income for the Fund, to reduce risk or to manage the Fund more efficiently. The Fund is actively managed with reference to the MSCI All Countries World Index, which is broadly representative of the companies in which it may invest, as this forms the basis of the Fund's performance target. The Investment Manager has discretion to choose investments for the Fund with weightings different to the index or not in the index, but at times the Fund may hold investments similar to the index.

Investment strategy

The Investment Manager seeks to grow capital by investing in companies with strong or improving cash flow. The Fund considers both growth criteria (i.e. where company earnings are expected to grow at an above-average rate), and value criteria (i.e. where share prices are expected to increase), to identify the best companies to invest in. The investment process looks to identify meaningful differences between the Investment Manager's analysis and the market's expectations. Taking a disciplined approach to portfolio construction and risk management, the Investment Manager aims to ensure that stock selection is the primary driver of returns.

Fund specific risks

Shares can lose value rapidly, and typically involve higher risks than bonds or money market instruments. The value of your investment may fall as a result. Emerging markets expose investors to higher volatility and greater risk of loss than developed markets; they are susceptible to adverse political and economic events, and may be less well regulated with less robust custody and settlement procedures. Derivatives may be used with the aim of reducing risk or managing the portfolio more efficiently. However, this introduces other risks, in particular, that a derivative counterparty may not meet its contractual obligations. If the Fund holds assets in currencies other than the base currency of the Fund, or you invest in a share/unit class of a different currency to the Fund (unless hedged, i.e. seeks to mitigate exchange rate movements between the share/unit class currency and the base currency of the Fund), the value of your investment may be impacted by changes in exchange rates. When the Fund, or a share/unit class, seeks to mitigate exchange rate movements of a currency relative to the base currency (hedge), the hedging strategy itself may positively or negatively impact the value of the Fund due to differences in short-term interest rates between the currencies. Securities could become hard to value or to sell at a desired time and price, especially in extreme market conditions when asset prices may be falling, increasing the risk of investment losses. Losses could be incurred if a counterparty became unwilling or unable to meet its obligations, or as a result of failure or delay in operational processes or the failure of a third party provider.
