Investment environment

- October was a challenging month for global equity markets, as investors reassessed the outlook for the artificial intelligence (AI) investment theme. Concerns about the scale of capital expenditure (capex) and whether this investment would ultimately generate sufficient returns weighed particularly on technology and communication services stocks. Rising oil prices, amid escalating tensions in the Middle East and renewed concerns about inflation, added to the uncertainty.
- This contributed to a notable shift in market leadership. Technology and communication services were among the weakest sectors, while value-style stocks outperformed growth-style stocks and investors shifted towards more defensive areas of the market. Energy was the best-performing sector as oil prices rose sharply, while healthcare and consumer staples also proved resilient.
- The weaker risk environment also increased demand for perceived safe-haven assets, helping global government bonds recover some of the previous months' losses. More broadly, October represented a continuation of themes that have characterised much of the year, reinforcing the importance of a flexible and adaptive investment approach in a persistently uncertain investment environment.

Portfolio review

In the long book, shares in Convatec performed well as investors became more confident in the company's medium-term growth and margin outlook. We continue to have confidence in its management's ability to deliver on targets, although following the strength in the shares, the valuation moved closer to our assessment of fair value and we reduced the position. Shares in Severn Trent also performed well as concerns around any potential nationalisation of UK water companies eased, which supported the recovery of its share price.

The primary detractors in the long book included IG Group and Barclays. IG Group issued a profit warning following lower trading activity and weaker revenue retention. While disappointing, we believe this reflected shorter-term fluctuations in profitability, driven by trading volatility rather than a change to the medium-term investment thesis. We continue to see IG Group as a growth business, supported by its ability to attract more customers to the platform and potentially retain a greater share of trading revenues over time. Shares in Barclays were weaker as more subdued investment banking activity led to earnings downgrades, while concerns around a potential UK bank tax also weighed on the shares. We continue to see considerable value in the business, particularly given the potential for improving returns and meaningful capital distributions through dividends and share buybacks.

The short book detracted from performance overall, driven in part by select short positions across the utilities, materials, and consumer staples sectors. Despite this, there were positive contributions from several positions within the short book. A short position in an aerospace company contributed positively, where we believe the valuation does not adequately reflect the potential impact of weaker air traffic growth and the retirement risk of older narrow-body aircraft. Elsewhere, a short position in a diversified mining company also contributed positively. We thought the company's valuation continued to look high relative to other large-cap miners, particularly given its exposure to iron ore and that significant capex could be required to grow its copper and potash businesses.

In terms of portfolio activity, we reduced a short position in a UK-listed property company following a capital raise to fund an acquisition, which we viewed as a sensible use of shareholder capital. Elsewhere, we initiated a long position in BT. We believe the competitive strength of incumbent operators in the UK telecom industry is improving, due to increasing financial pressures on alternative network providers. At the same time, we believe BT is approaching peak investment in its UK fibre rollout, and this might support a material improvement in free cash flow as capex moderates, which could lead to an increase in distributions to shareholders.

Manager outlook

Financial markets have contended with significant volatility and uncertainty this year, underscoring what we believe is a structural shift towards a regime where both geopolitical and economic disruption have become the norm. We think this backdrop increases the appeal of strategies that offer true diversification and differentiated drivers of returns, particularly while equity-bond correlations remain unstable. In our view, portfolio resilience in this environment hinges on adaptability – that is, the ability to shift exposures dynamically, capture opportunities on both sides of the book, and thrive amid volatility and dispersion.

Ultimately, we believe a strategy targeting a consistent real return regardless of market direction, with the potential to generate positive returns in weaker periods, can serve an important purpose in navigating the current investment landscape.

Investment policy

The Fund invests in shares and makes extensive use of derivatives (complex financial instruments) to take both 'long' and 'short' positions in companies the Investment Manager believes will either rise in value (long positions) or fall in value (short positions) meaning that the Fund may benefit from either scenario. The Fund will hold a significant proportion of its assets in cash and money market instruments as a result of holding derivatives and for when the Investment Manager wishes to take a defensive stance. Conversely, the Fund may also employ 'leverage' (so that the Fund can invest a greater amount than its actual value) when the Investment Manager has greater confidence in the opportunities available. Typically, at least 60% of the exposure to the long and short positions (in aggregate) will be to companies of any size, in any industry, in the UK. Companies may be incorporated or headquartered in the UK, deriving significant revenue from the UK, or listed on the London Stock Exchange. Up to 40% of the long and short exposure may be to non-UK companies. The Fund may also invest at the Investment Manager's discretion in other Transferable Securities, derivative instruments and collective investment schemes. The Investment Manager may also use derivatives (complex financial instruments) to reduce risk or to manage the Fund more efficiently. The Fund is actively managed with reference to the Bank of England Base Rate as this forms the basis of the Fund's performance target and the level above which performance fees may be charged (if applicable). For currency hedged Share Classes, the central bank rate that corresponds with the relevant Share Class currency is used as the basis of the performance comparison and for calculating performance fees. The Investment Manager has complete discretion to choose investments for the Fund and is not constrained by a benchmark.

Investment strategy

The Investment Manager blends core long term and tactical short term ideas to construct the portfolio. Ideas come from a variety of sources including proprietary research, external research and other Janus Henderson investment teams, with the intention of taking long positions in companies with unexpected earnings growth or value creation potential, and short positions in companies where earnings are priced in or where long term value is impaired.

Fund specific risks

Shares can lose value rapidly, and typically involve higher risks than bonds or money market instruments. The value of your investment may fall as a result. High exposure to a particular country or geographical region carries a higher level of risk than a more broadly diversified portfolio. If the Fund holds assets in currencies other than the base currency of the Fund, or you invest in a share/unit class of a different currency to the Fund (unless hedged, i.e. seeks to mitigate exchange rate movements between the share/unit class currency and the base currency of the Fund), the value of your investment may be impacted by changes in exchange rates. Derivatives may be used to help achieve the investment objective. This can result in leverage (higher levels of debt), which can magnify an investment outcome. Gains or losses may therefore be greater than the cost of the derivative. Derivatives also introduce other risks, in particular, that a derivative counterparty may not meet its contractual obligations. When the Fund, or a share/unit class, seeks to mitigate exchange rate movements of a currency relative to the base currency (hedge), the hedging strategy itself may positively or negatively impact the value of the Fund due to differences in short-term interest rates between the currencies. Securities could become hard to value or to sell at a desired time and price, especially in extreme market conditions when asset prices may be falling, increasing the risk of investment losses. Losses could be incurred if a counterparty became unwilling or unable to meet its obligations, or as a result of failure or delay in operational processes or the failure of a third party provider. The sustainability approach applied may exclude potential investments which do not meet certain criteria (e.g. non-financial criteria such as ESG screens). This may cause differences in performance compared to similar products that are permitted to invest in those investments.
