Portfolio management

Investment environment

- Japanese equities rose, driven by gains in artificial intelligence (AI)-related stocks and financials. The benchmark TOPIX Index reached an all-time high in August, although performance in September was tempered by increases in bond yields (and falling prices), higher energy prices, and concerns about global inflation.
- The Bank of Japan (BoJ), which adopted a more hawkish posture, delivered an interest rate hike of 25 basis points (bps) in September. This raised its key short-term rate to a 31-year high of 1.25%, with market consensus expecting further monetary policy tightening.
- The annual core inflation rate (which excludes volatile fresh food prices but includes various government subsidies) picked up modestly in July before slowing to 1.7% in August. GDP continued to expand, although growth dipped to an annualised 1.4% in the second quarter from 1.8% in the first quarter. Wages grew by the most in almost 30 years in July, while business sentiment in the manufacturing sector hit a five-year high in September, largely due to AI-related capital expenditure (capex).
- The yen strengthened against the US dollar over the quarter, amid a volatile backdrop.
- Japanese small-cap stocks underperformed their large-cap counterparts over the quarter, which may have been attributed to a softening in domestic demand.

Portfolio review

Key detractors centred on AI-related holdings, which included Toyo Gosei and Kanto Denka Kogyo (chemicals), alongside Harmonic Drive Systems (HDS) (factory automation). Toyo Gosei supplies photosensitive materials and high-purity solvents for the semiconductor industry, while Kanto Denka provides specialty gases used in semiconductor manufacturing. HDS provides speed reducers that are used in humanoid robots and semiconductor manufacturing equipment. After months of a strong run-up in their share prices, these stocks experienced a sharp sell-off in July due to a combination of technical factors and concerns around higher valuations. During the quarter, we trimmed but maintained positions in these stocks, as we believed the underlying fundamentals remained solid. For example, HDS announced strong first-quarter results and robust order growth. We believe the company could benefit from expectations of growing demand for AI and humanoid robots, as well as a recovery in demand for semiconductor manufacturing equipment.

The main contributor to performance was GMO Financial Holdings (financial products trading services), after the company posted a strong half-year trading statement on the back of higher trading volume in commodities, and the management team indicated the possibility of revising its dividends upwards in the second half of the year. Shares in Ichibanya (restaurants) also performed well following reports that its parent company, House Foods, was exploring a potential sale of its controlling interest in the former.

During the quarter, we initiated a position in tire and rubber products company Toyo Tires by taking advantage of weakness in its share price. Although we believe the company has competitive advantages in its core products, weaker sales of some products have weighed on its overall share performance. We closed the position in DKK (base station antennas) following the recent outperformance of its share price. We believed its operational turnaround and favourable shareholder return policy were largely priced in.

Manager outlook

We believe Japanese corporate governance reforms are transitioning into the next phase. At the same time, corporates hold record levels of cash (a two-fold increase over the past 10 years), despite delivering shareholder returns on an unprecedented scale. Currently, about half of the companies listed on the TOPIX Index have net cash balance sheets.

We expect the Tokyo Stock Exchange and Japan's Financial Services Agency to seek to address the hoarding of cash by corporations, including by encouraging them to increase investment, research and development (R&D), mergers and acquisitions (M&A), and the restructuring of less profitable businesses, with the aim of enhancing capital efficiency.

Over the next few years, Japanese small- and mid-cap firms may undergo significant business transformations because of stringent corporate governance requirements and growing pressure from shareholders. Therefore, we focus on improvements in corporate governance as a key value driver for the fund. To capture potential opportunities and help manage risk, we adjust our holding sizes in line with our convictions, following our quarterly management update interviews with the companies we hold in the fund.

Investment policy

The Fund invests at least two-thirds of its assets in a portfolio of shares (equities) and equity-related securities of smaller companies, in any industry, in Japan. The Fund may also invest in other assets including companies of any size, cash and money market instruments. The Investment Manager may use derivatives (complex financial instruments) to reduce risk or to manage the Fund more efficiently. The Fund is actively managed with reference to the Russell/Nomura Small Cap Index, which is broadly representative of the companies in which it may invest, as this forms the basis of the Fund's performance target and the level above which performance fees may be charged (if applicable). The Investment Manager has discretion to choose investments for the Fund with weightings different to the index or not in the index, but at times the Fund may hold investments similar to the index.

Investment strategy

The Investment Manager believes in-depth stock analysis, coupled with superior stock picking are the main drivers of superior long-term performance in Japanese smaller companies. The Fund is designed to capture the undervalued growth potential of Japanese smaller companies by typically investing in the smallest 25% of listed Japanese companies by market capitalisation using a disciplined, pragmatic and risk-aware investment process. The investment approach focuses on stock valuation, investment catalysts and long-term structural growth to drive earnings and returns.

Fund specific risks

Shares can lose value rapidly, and typically involve higher risks than bonds or money market instruments. The value of your investment may fall as a result. Shares of small and mid-size companies can be more volatile than shares of larger companies, and at times it may be difficult to value or to sell shares at desired times and prices, increasing the risk of losses. High exposure to a particular country or geographical region carries a higher level of risk than a more broadly diversified portfolio. Derivatives may be used with the aim of reducing risk or managing the portfolio more efficiently. However, this introduces other risks, in particular, that a derivative counterparty may not meet its contractual obligations. If the Fund holds assets in currencies other than the base currency of the Fund, or you invest in a share/unit class of a different currency to the Fund (unless hedged, i.e. seeks to mitigate exchange rate movements between the share/unit class currency and the base currency of the Fund), the value of your investment may be impacted by changes in exchange rates. When the Fund, or a share/unit class, seeks to mitigate exchange rate movements of a currency relative to the base currency (hedge), the hedging strategy itself may positively or negatively impact the value of the Fund due to differences in short-term interest rates between the currencies. Securities could become hard to value or to sell at a desired time and price, especially in extreme market conditions when asset prices may be falling, increasing the risk of investment losses. Losses could be incurred if a counterparty became unwilling or unable to meet its obligations, or as a result of failure or delay in operational processes or the failure of a third party provider.
